ABSTRACT

The Association of Christian Librarians is an interdenominational organization of 300 members made up of Christian librarians sharing interests in library service in Christian higher education. From its birth at a 1957 conference of 17 librarians, the association has grown to over 300 members. The association strives to promote, develop, and advance standards of library service in libraries of evangelical Christian institutions of higher learning. The association encourages Christian librarians' growth in spiritual, professional, and scholarly pursuits and provides opportunities for fellowship and service. Through the associations' journal, "The Christian Librarian," issues of concern to those engaged in service to institutions of Christian higher education are addressed. The "Christian Periodical Index," begun in 1959 and produced through volunteer member indexing, provides indexing access to numerous periodicals not covered by other indexes or abstracts. Various association members have contributed to missions through voluntary service to libraries both in the United States and abroad. The association published the "Library Manual for Missionaries" to assist untrained personnel who must provide library service. The Association of Christian Librarians has grown from a group of librarians seeking fellowship and professional interaction into an organization which not only seeks to better its own members but to contribute to the larger field of librarianship in Christian higher education. The Association of Christian Librarians

The Association of Christian Librarians is an interdenominational organization of 300 members made up of Christian librarians sharing interests in library service in Christian higher education. From its birth at a 1957 conference of seventeen librarians the Association has grown to over 300 members. The Association strives to promote, develop and advance standards of library service in libraries of evangelical Christian institutions of higher learning. The Association encourages Christian librarians' growth in spiritual, professional and scholarly pursuits as well as provides opportunities for fellowship and service. Through the Association's journal, The Christian Librarian, issues of concern to those engaged in service to institutions of Christian higher education are addressed. The Christian Periodical Index, begun in 1959 and produced through volunteer member indexing, provides indexing access to numerous periodicals not covered by other indexes or abstracts. Various Association members have contributed to missions through time in voluntary service to libraries both in the United States and abroad. The Association published the Library Manual for Missionaries to assist untrained personnel who must provide library service. The Association of Christian Librarians has grown from a group of librarians seeking fellowship and professional interaction into an organization which not only seeks to better its own members but to contribute to the larger field of librarianship in Christian higher education.

I. INTRODUCTION

Librarians possess numerous opportunities for membership in associations which afford affiliation with other librarians who share religious beliefs and values. The Catholic Library Association, the Association of Jewish Libraries, the Church & Synagogue Library Association, and the American Theological Library Association are examples of groups of librarians representing institutions that have organized together for a common purpose and share mutual goals. One group, however, differs from these other library associations. The Association of Christian Librarians is the only group that expresses in its name that it is an organization of librarians not an organization for institutions.

During 1956, several librarians serving at Christian schools expressed a need for some sort of interaction and fellowship with other Christian librarians. Through the efforts of several dedicated women, the summer of 1957 saw the first official meeting of what became the Christian Librarians' Fellowship. The seventeen people representing thirteen schools who assembled at Nyack Missinary College in New York determined to take three definite steps: 1) to begin the publication of a quarterly newsletter to be called The Christian Librarian, 2) to appoint a committee to investigate the development and publication of an index to Christian periodicals, and 3) to meet the following year to determine if a permanent organization would be feasible and desirable. From this meager start came the birth of the fellowship which would continue to serve the needs of Christian librarians for years to come. The 1958 conference resulted in concrete action toward the publication of the periodical index. By 1959 the group had established its newsletter, produced the first volume of the Christian Periodical Index, and adopted a constitution, by-laws, and statement of faith. The purpose of the organization was, and still is, expressed as follows:

In order to bring greater honor to the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the Association of Christian Librarians proposes to bring its members into a deeper realization of their divine call to His service, and by prayer, study, and working together over the distinctive problems of Christian librarianship make each library more useful to our Lord. Thus the Fellowship shall direct and carry on a program of activities to advance the standards of library service in Christian schools, and the continued spiritual, professional and scholarly growth of those engaged in work in these libraries (By-Laws 1992).

Purpose of the Study

The purpose of this study is to provide a historical case study of the Association of Christian Librarians (ACL). An attempt has been made in this paper to examine such issues as: what factors influenced the genesis of this organization, what accomplishments has the association made, how have these accomplishments been achieved without having paid staff, and what changes have taken place in the organization over its thirty-four year history.

Definitions of Terms

For purposes of this study certain terms have been defined as follows:

Christian librarians : Persons professing belief in Jesus Christ who are involved in librarianship affiliated with evangelical Christian institutions of higher learning.

II. LITERATURE REVIEW

Patillo and Mackenzie (1966) conducted a detailed study of church-affiliated colleges and universities in the United States. Their report, Church-Sponsored Higher Education in the United States sponsored by the Danforth Commission, contributed significantly to the understanding of the position and purpose of American higher education as related to organized religious institutions.

In the July, 1983 issue of Special Libraries, Hannaford (1983) discusses the history and structure of the Church and Synagogue Library Association. Awards and publications of this Association are also described as are the Association's relationships with other professional organizations in the library community.

The American Theological Library Association has been examined by both Tuttle and Mehl. Tuttle's "History of the American Theological Library Association" focused on the Association's fulfillment of its objectives through the Association's publications and committee activities (Tuttle 1961). Mehl's examination of the American Theological Library Association concentrated on the Association's role in American Protestant Theological libraries and librarianship (Mehl 1973).

Jenkin (1990) reported on a statistical survey of the members of the Australian and New Zealand Theological Library Association. This Association survey included libraries representing such diverse groups as Anglican, Baptist, Church of Christ, Lutheran, Orthodox, Presbyterian, Reformed, Roman Catholic, Seventh Day Adventists and United, as well as Bible Colleges. Jenkin notes that theological library statistics have several uses in the attempt to ensure adequate resources for research by staff and students. Statistical information can be used in arguing for better resources. The statistics are also necessary as a basis for planning both by individual libraries and in cooperative efforts with other libraries. The statistics can also be compiled into directory type information for libraries within that particular interest group.

Haymes (1991) discussed the areas of mutual interest for the Catholic Library Association (CLA) and the American Theological Library Association (ATLA). The two associations serve different clientele. CLA has mostly a Catholic constituency but it serves varied professional commitments for institutions ranging from parish schools to seminaries and universities. ATLA particularly serves seminary and academic libraries but has an ecumenical membership composed of varied Christian groups (including Catholic), Jews and others beyond the Christian or Jewish theological tradition. Haymes notes:

"Association" denotes an organization of people characterized by common purpose and formal structure. This definition implies that "structure" exists to accomplish "purposes," and are to be judged by whether and how well those purposes are accomplished...Library associations are no less accountable for what they do, both in the merit of their purposes and the manner in which they accomplish them (Haymes 1991, 106).

Haymes claimed that associations "exist to do what the members want done and cannot individually do by and for themselves" (Haymes 1991, 106). He challenged members to examine the privileges and benefits of membership and to question whether or not the association is doing what they want and how it is helping them.

Haymes admonished theological librarians and their library associations to be concerned with issues of "professional credibility and professional responsibility" (Haymes 1991, 107). He suggested the following questions for consideration:

1. How do we establish the credibility of theological librarianship as a profession?
2. What are the minimum standards for theological libraries?
3. If ATLA and CLA abstain from establishing and enforcing professional and institutional standards, will they be prepared to help members deal with the difficult issues of diminishing resources and declining budgets?

The efficient utilization of cataloging information related to religious literature was discussed by Knop, Baker, and Fie (1989). The American Theological Library Association Preservation Board has been involved in the cataloging and preservation of religious literature published after 1850. Keying the data into computers allows various products to be produced without having to reenter the information.

McCallon (1992) surveyed library directors of the seventy-six Christian College Coalition schools. The survey focused on issues related to online database searching. Results indicated that 84% of the respondents (94.5 percent return rate) offered in-house online searching services with Dialog being the service most commonly used. McCallon found it encouraging that such a large percentage of Coalition schools provided for this important service.

Shiels and Alt (1985) focused on the library collection of materials relating to the history of Christianity at The Ohio State University. They conducted an analysis of the OSU collection in comparison to four other Big Ten schools. A bibliographic assessment of the collection was performed using lists of titles in published bibliographies and in the Library of Congress. Finally, a user survey was conducted to identify who used the collection, what their needs were, and what their perceptions were.

An examination of issues in developing a religious studies collection was made by Alt (1991). After a discussion of the nature of the discipline of religious studies, Alt noted several areas in which selection in this area is unique. Patrons may occasionally display an unusual degree of concern regarding the collection development policy in this discipline. Bibliographers may allow their own faith to unduly influence the selections. Selectors need to know the breadth and depth of the collection as well as an awareness of what types of materials are available.

Relevant literature concerning the Association of Christian Librarians can be found in the Association's official organ, The Christian Librarian. The published history of the Association can only be found in the pages of this periodical. In 1982 the Association celebrated its twentieth-fifth anniversary with an anniversary issue of The Christian Librarian. This publication included several articles describing the early days of the organization and its growth over the years. Crucial to understanding the development of the association are the articles by two of the group's founders, Miss Shirley Wood (1982) and Miss Ivy Olson (1982).

III. METHODOLOGY

For this historical research study, several methods of data collection were utilized and extensive examination of published and unpublished materials was conducted. The Association's journal, The Christian Librarian provided the primary source of published information on the organization. The Christian Periodical Index and the Library Manual for Missionaries were examined as the only other published materials issued by the Association. Primary source materials such as minutes of Executive Board meetings and correspondence by elected officials of the Association were helpful in documenting many of the decisions made by officials of the group. Early membership lists helped document statistical information related to the Association's composition and growth.

The official archives of the Association of Christian Librarians and copies of the complete run of The Christian Librarian are housed at the Cedarville College Library, Cedarville, Ohio. This researcher was given permission to access any archival materials required to conduct this study. The former Executive Secretary of the Association as well as the Treasurer and the Archivist cooperated in the collection of the data related to the Association's history.

In June, 1990, the Association's annual conference was held in Cedarville, Ohio. Personal recollections and anecdotes from people involved with the early days of the Association provided a rich source of information that would otherwise be unavailable. Informal interviews were conducted with some of the older members of the Association and are summarized or paraphrased in this research paper.

Some of the questions asked of members interviewed include the following:

- 1) How/when did you first hear about the Association of Christian Librarians (or Christian Librarians' Fellowship)?
- 2) When did you join the Association?
- 3) What made you want to be associated with this group?
- 4) What has been your involvement with the Association over the years? Positions/offices held?
- 5) Have you benefited from being involved in the Association on a personal and/or a professional level? How?
- 6) What effect, if any, have national or world events had on the Association?
- 7) What effect, if any, have changes in the educational climate made on the Association?
- 8) How has the Association changed over the years? What trends do you see for the future?
- 9) What improvements would you like to see the Association make to better serve the members and the institutions?
- 10) What do you see as the Association's main accomplishments over the years?

IV. CHRISTIAN LIBRARIANS' FELLOWSHIP / ASSOCIATION OF CHRISTIAN LIBRARIANS

History

During the mid 1950s several librarians at Christian colleges in the United States had a desire for interaction and fellowship with librarians serving in similar situations. Many of these librarians felt a sense of isolation. The institutions in which they worked rarely had more than one professionally trained person in the library. Teaching faculty could interact with other teachers regarding concerns and special problems, but the librarian had only student and non-professional co-workers with whom to consult (Wood 1966). Even if money were available for attendance at library conferences, the topics discussed and perspectives of those presenting workshops were often not appropriate or applicable for the librarian from the small Christian college. Shirley Wood recalls that "few of us knew any other Christian librarians...Many of us had never even been inside another Christian library" (Wood 1966, 5) These librarians longed for an opportunity to fellowship with others who shared their "Christian philosophy of life and service" (Wood 1966, 5).

In 1955, the deans of women of Christian colleges held their first conference. The success of this conference and the fellowship enjoyed by the attendees prompted several librarians to begin actively seeking to develop this same opportunity for librarians (Wood 1966). The women involved in the developmental stages of this fledgling library organization were Shirley Wood, Dorothy Spidell, Mary Jane Kergerize, Marian Boyjian, and Emily Russel (see Appendix A). While sharing a desire for interaction with other Christian librarians, these women did not know how to contact other librarians who might be prospective participants in a proposed conference. A mailing list of evangelical schools was obtained from the Christian Deans of Women and the first letters of inquiry were sent to 60 different libraries. According to Shirley Wood the responses which came in were overwhelmingly enthusiastic (Wood 1966). The need for fellowship felt by these individuals was obviously shared by numerous librarians. Many of those who indicated that they could not accept the invitation to attend the first conference were anxious to be informed of future developments with this specialized group.

Although totally inexperienced with organizing a professional conference, the founding librarians decided to definitely hold a meeting in 1957. Dorothy Spidell's school, Nyack Missionary College, agreed to serve as host for the initial meeting. The program for the first conference was jointly planned by Emily Russel and Dr. Mary Bennett of the Philadelphia Bible Institute. This premier conference had seventeen attendees representing thirteen schools. Those attending included: Dr. C. Harrington, E. Ehlke, D. Spidell, J. Finch, E. Dinming, A. Regier, R. Butler, M. Boyjian, S. Wood, M. Waggoner, E. Russel, M. Kergerize, and E. Parry. The conference included a tour of the H.W. Wilson publishing plant. During this tour the group was introduced to Miss Marie Loizeaux, then the editor of Wilson Bulletin, who later became the Fellowship's first associate member (Wood 1966). This first conference was a tremendous success. Shirley Wood summarized the first conference's success by saying, "When the group at Nyack met (almost all strangers to one another) we found our hearts knit together and in agreement as to the purposes we should have. The result was a thrilling time of fellowship, most rewarding both professionally and spiritually' (Wood 1969b, 9) The conference concluded with three goals: 1) to institute a quarterly newsletter, The Christian Librarian, 2) to appoint a committee to work on starting an Index to Christian Periodicals, and 3) to meet again the following year and to determine if a permanent organization should be organized (Wood 1966).

The 1958 conference met at Baptist Bible Seminary in Johnson City, New York. At this meeting hosted by Miriam Waggoner, the twenty-one Christian librarians from fifteen schools (Wood 1969a) made concrete decisions which would lead to the formal organization of the Christian Librarians' Fellowship. Ruth Butler, librarian at Buffalo Bible Institute, was appointed as editor of the still to be produced Christian Periodical Index. Magazines were assigned to volunteer indexers recruited from the librarians attending the 1958 conference. The group also elected a chairman and co-chairman to plan the next conference. Also appointed was a committee to draw up a Constitution and By-Laws for the Fellowship of Christian Librarians (Wood 1982). This meeting also marked the first appearance of what was to become a long-standing tradition and a widely appreciated feature of the summer conferences. Christian publishers were solicited and exhibits were sponsored which allowed librarians to examine materials which were of particular interest to Christian librarians and which might not routinely be found at other library conferences (Wood 1969a).

When the group met at Washington Bible College in 1959, a Statement of Faith (see Appendix B for current Doctrinal Statement), as well as a Constitution and By-Laws (see Appendix C for current By-Laws) for the new organization, were adopted (Wood 1969b). The Fellowship experienced consistent growth during the 1960s. Twenty-six people from nineteen different schools attended the 1960 conference at Buffalo Bible Institute. Membership figures for that year indicated forty-six paid members. By 1964 the attendance at the annual conference was up to forty, and by 1965, fifty people attended the annual meeting at Roberts Wesleyan College in North Chili, New York. Total membership had reached 140 by 1969 and the conference in Grand Rapids, Michigan was attended by 70 people (Wood 1969a).

By 1993 the membership of the Association of Christian Librarians exceeded 320. The Association has not only grown in numbers, but has also experienced growth in services and outreach. Early in the organization's history membership was limited to librarians affiliated with evangelical Christian institutions of higher learning. Currently, full Association membership is available to any Christian librarian affiliated with an institution of higher learning. Association publications have had worldwide distribution through librarians and mission personnel involved in Christian service abroad. And the Association has undertaken a major role in service to libraries and librarians in developing countries through the activities of the Commission for International Library Assistance.

Organizational Structure

The Association of Christian Librarians (known as Christian Librarians' Fellowship before 1981) has always been organized with volunteer members and officers elected from the membership. Two categories of membership exist for the Association: Full Members, and Associate Members. Full members are described as "Christian librarians who subscribe to the purposes of the corporation" and are "affiliated with an institution of higher learning" (By-Laws 1992, 2). Only full members are eligible to hold office or to serve on the Board of Directors. Associate members are Christian librarians not affiliated with institutions of higher learning or non-librarians. These associate members are not permitted to vote, hold office or serve on the Board of Directors, but they receive all other benefits of Association membership.

The Association is governed by a Board of at least three Directors elected by the membership (By-Laws 1992). One interesting detail which still remains in the By-Laws regarding directors reflects the state of librarianship within the Christian academic community during the early days of this group's existence. The By-Laws require that directors who are to be Board members must be at least nineteen years of age. In the 1950s and 1960s, many Christian college libraries could not afford to employ or could not find to employ fully credentialed librarians. Often librarians in these schools came without having training or even experience in library work. These librarians gained on-the-job training and many pursued and completed library degrees while working for their schools. Interestingly, the By-Laws state that full members who retire or who return to college for further study in library science will not be denied full membership during the time they are furthering their education. Early issues of The Christian Librarian often included notices of congratulations to members who had completed their professional degrees.

Association business is conducted at the annual membership meeting which occurs during the annual Conference (see Appendix D for Conference locations and hosts). The Association, however, is managed by the Board of Directors and such Committees as the Board and the membership designate. Particular officials are elected by the general membership. These officers include: President, and executive Vice-President, a second Vice-President, a Secretary, and a Treasurer (see Appendix E for Association Presidents). Currently the Board also elects a Vice-President in charge of public relations, an Archivist and an Executive Director (By-Laws 1992).

Committees

Several committees contribute to the effective management of the organization. The Executive Committee comprised of the Board President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and the Executive Director is empowered to act on behalf of the Board in all matters except the composition of the final annual budget. The Standing Committee on Nominations is responsible for nominating officers and directors. The Standing Committee on Development functions as the "planning arm of the Association" (Membership Directory 1993, 6). This committee's tasks include "preparing short and long range developmental plans, investigating issues assigned to it by the Board and performing surveys and evaluations" (Membership Directory 1993, 6). The committee is composed of the President, Executive Director, Public Relations Director, and two additional members of the Association as appointed by the Board.

Association publications are produced through the efforts of two committees along with the contributions of numerous members. The Standing Committee on the Index oversees the publication and sale of the Christian Periodical Index. The Board appoints an editor, an advertising/publicity manager and a circulation editor for the CPI. The Standing Committee on the Journal has responsibility for all aspects of The Christian Librarian. An editor-in-chief, a managing editor, a news editor, a book review editor, and an advertising editor assist in publishing this official organ of the Association.

Two committees exist to represent and further the interests of particular groups of libraries represented in the Association. The Standing Committee on Bible College Libraries aims to promote the interest of libraries located in Bible colleges and serves as the liaison group with the American Association of Bible Colleges. The Standing Committee on Liberal Arts Colleges and Libraries strives to promote the interests of member libraries associated with liberal arts colleges.

The Program Committee carries the responsibility for developing and executing the program for the annual conference. This committee is composed of a program chair, a representative of the host library, and the Association Vice-President to advise the program chair and to keep the Board informed of progress regarding the Conference. Decisions regarding accepting or rejecting applications for membership of applicants who object to signing the doctrinal statement or who have reservations about any part of the doctrinal statement are the responsibility of the Standing Committee on Membership Eligibility. The President, Vice-President and the Executive Director make up this Committee.

Cooperative Activities

The Association is composed of librarians representing libraries of varying sizes and resources. Many of the smaller libraries lack the need or financial ability to be members of a resource sharing entity such as OCLC. In the late 1980s the Association began to investigate the possibility of establishing OCLC Group Access Capability (GAC) for a group of Association members. In 1991 the Christian Library Association Network (CLAN symbol) was established "to provide a mechanism for resource sharing and cooperation among institutional members" (Membership Directory 1993, 31). Currently 49 institutions, who employ at least one full Association member, are members of CLAN.

Publications of the Organization

The group of librarians who organized as the Christian Librarians' Fellowship and later as the Association of Christian Librarians has been involved in publishing since its establishment. The publication The Christian Librarian has been a vehicle for information and communication between the Association and the membership since the very beginning of the group. A commitment to the Christian Periodical Index was made at the very first meeting of the Fellowship. A significant contribution to the profession was made with this Index which addressed the specialized needs of librarians working in Christian institutions of higher education. The Library Manual for Missionaries was produced to fill a need beyond the immediate concerns of the membership. This publication attempted to serve those librarians serving in areas of the world that might not have access to the resources, training, and support readily available to Christian librarians in North America.

The Christian Librarian

During the initial conference meeting of the fledgling Christian Librarian's Fellowship, a commitment was made to start a quarterly newsletter. The Christian Librarian, which was to become the official organ of the organization, was first published in July, 1957. Cost for the first issue was $.50 (Jordahl 1982). Miss Lillian Cole from Baptist Bible Seminary in Johnson City, New York, and Miss Shirley Wood from Columbia Bible College, Columbia, South Carolina, served as chairmen of the Newsletter Committee during the newsletter's early years (Wood 1969a). Issues of the publication included articles on subjects of particular interest to members of the group as well as reports from annual conferences. Regional reporters were utilized in gathering news of interest to members.

The first four numbers of the publication were prepared by Judith Borlen of Buffalo Bible Institute, Elizabeth Dinning of Washington Bible College, Edith Ehlke of Fort Wayne Bible College, and Eleanor Parry of Central Bible Institute. These early issues, averaging four pages, mimeographed and reporting on the activities and business of the Christian Librarian's Fellowship, contained summaries of some conference sessions and included short articles (Jordahl 1982). Each issue of the newsletter continued to be prepared by a different person until the 1968-1969 term. Alberta Chaffee of Cedarville College became the chairman of the committee at that time and continued in that position through volumes 12-15. With volume 12 the publication progressed to offset printing with justified margins and a colored cover. The average length of the issues by this time was up to thirteen pages. John Witmer from Dallas Theological Seminary assumed the chair of the Newsletter Committee for volumes 16-18.

With volume 19, P. Paul Snezek became chair of the Newsletter Committee. Mr. Snezek, "without access to a word processor or typesetting facilities...painstakingly justified lines manually on a typewriter" (Jordahl 1982, 78). Through these efforts, Mr. Snezek convinced the Board of Directors to accept his vision for the publication. By 1976 when volume 20 was published Mr. Snezek became the editor of The Christian Librarian which was to be identified as the Journal of the Christian Librarians' Fellowship. With this philosophical shift, the journal moved toward a more professional publication while still functioning as the reporting vehicle for Association news and business. Book reviews and placement ads appeared in the publication, and the first commercial advertisements were printed in volume 20. Since 1978 Ron Jordahl of Prairie Bible Institute, Three Hills, AB Canada has been editor of The Christian Librarian (Jordahl 1982).

A list of possible article topics from a 1969 edition of The Christian Librarian demonstrates the timeless issues facing librarians in institutions of various sizes and differing theological stands. That list of topics included: 1) censorship and freedom to read, 2) faculty status and rank for librarians, 3) collection evaluation, 4) faculty involvement in book selection in light of the curriculum, 5) library's role in audiovisuals and audiovisual equipment, 6) funding, and 7) practicality of keeping the library open 24-hours (Professional problems 1969). The Christian Librarian still remains:

directed to Christian Librarians in institutions of higher learning and publishes articles on Christian interpretation of librarianship, theory and practice of library science, bibliographic essays, reviews, and human interest articles relating to books and libraries (Membership Directory 1993, 8).

The purpose of The Christian Librarian states:

The Christian librarian, experiencing the redemptive love of God through Jesus Christ our Lord, has an obligation to apply his faith to his vocation. This should be the norm for the Christian and should be for the edification of the Christian community of librarians and to the entire profession.

The Christian Librarian is one of the vehicles through which those who have joined the Association of Christian Librarians can communicate their interpretation of their vocation. It invites all those in the Association and others to submit materials for consideration for publication (Jordahl 1982, 79).

The Christian Periodical Index

The 1957 meeting at Nyack provided many opportunities for fellowship and sharing among the librarians attending. Certain of the commitments agreed upon at that first conference concerned further meeting the fellowship needs of librarians in Christian institutions of higher education. But the librarians involved in the Christian Librarians Fellowship were not only interested in what they, personally, could gain from this association. A commitment was made at the initial meeting to investigate the feasibility of publishing an index which would make a professional contribution.

At the first meeting of the Fellowship in 1957, a committee consisting of Ruth Butler, Miriam Waggoner and Dorothy Spidell was appointed to work on what was to become the Christian Periodical Index (Butler 1982). By 1958 when the group formally decided to organize, a definite commitment was made toward the production of the Index and magazines to be indexed were assigned to librarians. The first issue of the Index was unveiled at the 1959 conference. Ora Ann Sprague joined the committee in 1959. Volume 1 of the Index indexed 17 periodicals and cost $4.00 for members and $5.00 for non-members (Butler 1982). The first cumulated volume of the Index was published in 1961 covering 1956-1960. When book reviews were added to the Index, Ivy Olson joined the committee as Book Review Editor. The Index became a quarterly publication in the 1970s with the fourth quarterly including the yearly annual. Currently the Index is published three times yearly (Membership Directory 1993).

Although the Index is managed by the Standing Committee on the Index elected by the membership, subscribers have been frequently polled regarding suggested titles to be added or deleted from the Index. Ruth Butler states:

From the beginning it was determined that the criteria for inclusion would be periodicals that were evangelical in outlook or of interest to evangelicals. Over the years the committee has endeavored to have a balance of disciplines in the representative periodical list (Butler 1982, 77).

As of 1992 the Christian Periodical Index has over 95 English language titles which are "of interest to undergraduate students in evangelical Christian institutions of higher education" (Membership Directory 1993, 8). Periodicals indexed are not limited to journals of theology or biblical studies. Journals representing a "broad spectrum of knowledge from a Christian perspective" are included and cover such areas as "science, literature, history, medicine, music, philosophy, mass media, education, sociology, and political science" (Membership Directory 1993, 8).

Christian Periodical Index is a publication which would not exist without the involvement and participation of Association members. As of 1993 the 95 titles are indexed by 35 Association members who volunteer their time and expertise to produce the index. Originally the index entries were separately typed on 3 x 5 cards, then interfiled, and typed into index format. Starting with the 1983 annual index the Association contracted with the Inforonics Company to produce the index via computer. Index entries were still typed on sheets by the volunteers and Inforonics keyed the information into computer format. By 1989 the entries were being keyed directly onto computer disks by the indexers and sent to Inforonics for index compilation and production. In 1991 the Association purchased Library Master software and the contract with Inforonics expired. Currently the Christian Periodical Index is produced in-house by members of the CPI Committee.

Library Manual for Missionaries

challenged the Association to develop a handbook to address the need of Christian organizations and missionary groups appealing for assistance with library organization and management (Olson 1969). In the February, 1971 issue of The Christian Librarian Dorothy Spidell (1971) and P. Paul Snezek (1971a; 1971b) reiterated the need for the Association to provide help to missionaries. In June of 1971 a committee was established to investigate ways the Association could assist libraries on the mission field. By 1973 the annual conference focused on determining and developing the topics to be included in a proposed manual for missionaries who needed help organizing and administering libraries. At the 1974 conference an editorial committee was appointed. Association members closely involved in the development of the manual were: Dr. Lucy Maddox, Ivy Olson, Susan Schultz, Marie Loizeau, Clara Ruth Stone and Alberta Chaffe. Finally in 1979 the Library Manual for Missionaries edited by Clara Ruth Stone was published by the Christian Librarians' Fellowship (Stone 1979).

The Library Manual for Missionaries focused on traditional issues of concern to librarians serving in academic organizations but particularly to those serving in a mission setting. Topics covered included: administration, services to users, selection of materials, acquisitions, cataloging, classification, preparation of books and cards, filing, nonbook materials, care and preservation, and building planning. A glossary, bibliographies of reference materials and professional publications, a list of publishers and suppliers, and a sample book selection policy were included (Stone 1979).

The manual is currently being revised and will be published bearing a new title by the end of 1993.

Mission Involvement

The Association has demonstrated a concern for worldwide missions through various individual and group activities. The Christian Librarian is regularly sent to Association members and other subscribers throughout the world. The Christian Periodical Index is also being used by libraries in numerous foreign countries. The Library Manual for Missionaries has aided missionaries and other Christian workers who may not have library training or experience to adequately deal with library work in preparing nationals in foreign locations for Christian ministry.

Monetary gifts and awards have also been designated for assisting missionaries and promoting library work in foreign countries. Scholarship funds for visiting personnel and instructional workshops have been provided to further international library training in such locations as the Philippines, the Caribbean area, Thailand, India, and Nigeria.

Dorothy K. Spidell's 1982 article on ACL and missions chronicled Association members' overseas library service. In 1990 a questionnaire was distributed to annual conference attendees to determine members' involvement in international library assistance (and any interest in such involvement) and what skills members possessed which they would practice or teach in an international setting.

The Commission for International Library Assistance (CILA) is the vehicle for promoting and coordinating Association mission-related activities and projects. The Commission was specifically formed "to develop a strategic plan for assisting Christian libraries in the developing countries of the world" (Commission for International Library Assistance). Grant proposals have been submitted which would provide support for various international activities including: publishing a second edition of the Library Manual for Missionaries, training materials to supplement the Library Manual, training workshops in Third World countries, facilitating the translation and distribution of Librarian's Helper (a software program for cataloging), and scholarships and internships (information from unpublished correspondence and reports of CILA members). CILA's plans include:

- conduct regular training sessions worldwide
- develop computer applications for library use
- publish a simplified library manual
- build a network of Christian librarians and equip them to serve abroad
- compile bibliographies, indexes and library related materials
- facilitate international library telecommunications and electronic networks (Commission for International Library Assistance)

CILA's international cooperating organizations include:

- ACTEA Librarians Fellowship (Accrediting Council for Theological Education in Africa)
- AETEI (The Association for Evangelical Theological Education in India)
- CETA Librarians Fellowship (Caribbean Evangelical Theological Association)
- FCLT (Fellowship of Christian Libraries in Thailand)
- ICAA (International Council of Accrediting Agencies)
- MATE (Mission for Advancing Theological Education)
- Commission for International Library Assistance

The Emily Russel Award

The Emily Russel Award is presented by the Association of Christian Librarians in "recognition of outstanding contribution to Christian librarianship" (The Emily Russel Award 1982, 77). The award is named in honor of Miss Emily G. Russel. Miss Russel served with China Inland Missions for over six years. Upon her return to the U.S. for medical reasons, she became a college instructor and then a seminary librarian. Until her death in 1971 Miss Russel maintained a vital interest in missions (Spidell 1982). Recipients of the award in honor of Miss Russel are selected by the Board of Directors, or a special committee appointed by the Board (see Appendix F for Emily Russel Award recipients). The Board also determines the frequency and number of these awards to be presented. The award is in the form of a certificate. Nominations for the award are based on "areas of recognition" such as:

Foreign service either to missionaries or in libraries on the mission field.

Special achievement in the librarian's own home community situation, church, or other special libraries.

Publication or contribution to library literature.

Initiating innovative experiments--e.g. with library use, media, etc.

Professional organization activities (Membership Directory 1993, 12).

Future of the Association of Christian Librarians

The theme of the Association's 1993 conference at Bethel College was "Expanding Our Horizons: the purpose of the academic library, the role of the academic library, and the impact of technology on both." Keynote speaker at the conference was Dr.

Evan Farber of Earlham College. The theme "Expanding Our Horizons" embodied the direction the Association has been taking in recent years. Through the activities of the Commission on International Library Assistance, the Association has become more involved in service and support to libraries in Third World countries. The Association has sought to contribute to worldwide Christian mission activities related to libraries.

The Association has also sought to expand its financial horizon through grant proposals. Already a modest success has been realized in this area and the prospect for receiving further grant monies appears optimistic. For the first time in its history the Association business has necessitated hired clerical staff to assist the Business Manager and Managing Editor of ACL Publications.

The activities, outreach, and vision of the Association of Christian Librarians continues to increase. From its beginning primarily as a vehicle for fellowship among Christian librarians, the Association has developed into a contributing member of the library community. Through spiritual and professional activities of Association members, and through Association publications produced through the volunteer work of members, the Association of Christian Librarians continues to fulfill its purpose as stated in the By-Laws:

1. To promote the continued professional, scholarly and spiritual growth of all Christian librarians in institutions of higher learning.
2. To encourage the development of libraries in institutions of higher learning--especially evangelical Christian institutions--by exchanging ideas and materials.
3. To advance the standards of library service in institutions of higher learning served by the membership.

4. To publish materials and to participate in projects that may be of mutual benefit to its members and their libraries By-Laws 1992.

Appendix B:
Doctrinal Statement for the Association of Christian Librarians

We believe that there is one God, eternally existing in three persons: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

We believe the Bible to be the inspired, the only infallible, authoritative word of God.

We believe in the Deity of our Lord Jesus Christ, in His virgin birth, in His sinless life, in His miracles, in His vicarious death and atonement through His shed blood, in His bodily resurrection, in His ascension to the right hand of the Father, and in His personal and visible return in power and glory.

We believe that man was created in the image of God, that he was tempted by Satan and fell, and that, because of the exceeding sinfulness of human nature, regeneration by the Holy Spirit is absolutely necessary for salvation.

We believe in the present ministry of the Holy Spirit by Whose indwelling the Christian is enabled to live a godly life, and by Whom the Church is empowered to carry out Christ's great commission.

We believe in the bodily resurrection of both the saved and the lost, those who are saved unto the resurrection of life and those who are lost unto the resurrection of damnation.

We believe the Bible in its original writings to be the only infallible, authoritative Word of God.

We believe in the Deity of our Lord Jesus Christ, in His virgin birth, in His sinless life, in His miracles, in His vicarious death and atonement through His shed blood, in His bodily resurrection, in His ascension to the right hand of the Father, and in His personal and visible return in power and glory.

We believe that man was created in the image of God, that he was tempted by Satan and fell, and that, because of the exceeding sinfulness of human nature, regeneration by the Holy Spirit is absolutely necessary for salvation.

We believe in the present ministry of the Holy Spirit by Whose indwelling the Christian is enabled to live a godly life, and by Whom the Church is empowered to carry out Christ's great commission.

We believe in the bodily resurrection of both the saved and the lost, those who are saved unto the resurrection of life and those who are lost unto the resurrection of damnation.

In order to bring greater honor to the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the Association of Christian Librarians, Inc. proposes to bring its members into a deeper realization of their divine call to His service, and by prayer, study, and working together strive to meet the needs of evangelical Christian librarians serving in institutions of higher learning.

4.1.3.1.3 Because the index serves many foreign libraries and many small libraries with limited access to other indexing services, and because its indexing terminology is better suited to the needs of evangelical readers, Christian Periodical Index includes titles indexed elsewhere. Value is placed on the unique bibliographic contribution of the index, however, and consideration is given to the coverage of other indexing services in all decisions to add or drop periodicals.

4.1.3.1.4 Although the index is limited to periodicals written from a Christian perspective, its coverage is not limited to theology. The goal is to include periodicals dealing with all of the major subject areas of interest in liberal arts or Bible college libraries.

4.1.3.1.5 Periodicals are selected primarily on the basis of their usefulness in an academic setting; periodicals of purely devotional interest are generally not included.

4.1.3.1.6 Periodicals written primarily in languages other than English and periodicals too advanced or specialized for undergraduates are generally not included.
